

Institute of Literature and Languages

The study fields offered by the Institute belong to humanities: communication and media studies, business administration. Our students get an insight into the world of modern media; shoot spots and short documentary films. They learn how to work in teams and on their own, and they take part in international competitions. They become skilled in written and electronic communication. Our staff is highly qualified; they are involved in daily face to face teaching, and publish their research thus sharing their findings with a wider range of the academic public.
